FIVE CENTS

OF BRANDON.

Cor. 9th St. & Rosser Ave.

I. R. STROME.

On Wednesday of last week, another person was admitted to the use of morphine and his death in rather a tragic manner. A Wilmington woman gives the following particulars of the case: "My husband had been suffering from the father trade since leaving Brandon, and he became excited, and when the supply of liquor ran out, a search for more was made in the mother's locker. By a young man of the party. He found a bottle of whisky and he took a couple of drinks and, and on his coming what it was, told the drunken man they could not drink that, but the latter got hold of the bottle and feeling with it to the floor, the bottle was broken. The father came in and in his heated state, evidently thinking the bottle contained whisky and fearing the mother would take it from him, hastily tossed it to the mother and drank a couple of glasses. The mother, who was immediately attacked with convulsions and shortly became unconscious. The train hands did all they could to relieve him, administering such remedies as they were able to make, but without success. The mother, who was a 'Vig' arrival here, and on seeing the man's condition, ordered him to be removed to the hospital. He was taken out in the ambulance, but a few minutes after reaching the hospital he expired. It is said that the mother was very much distressed, and played by the C.P.R. as a watchman at Corona, and that his name was Peter Bright. He was on his way from the coast to Detroit. When he drank the liquor the train was on this side of Portage in the Pullman. The mother was the wife of a man suffering from epilepsy, and the convulsions were very distressing."

A son of Mr. Phil Baker, of Holland, Mo., was evidently shot by his brother, last week.

The steamship Abyssinia arrived at port from China last week, with a cargo, 25 passengers and 119 Chinese.

A BIG BLAZE AT PORTAGE.

At eight o'clock on Friday evening the Pioneer mill at Portage, Wis., owned by Messrs. Johnson & Barclay, was discovered to be on fire, and in less than an hour the whole premises were destroyed, including the mill, elevator and warehouse. It started in the main building and soon spread itself from one department to another, until the last building to catch was the elevator and warehouse, which was one mass of flames. The citizens turned out on horse to do their duty, but the only property saved was a few sacks of oats and wheat. The new fire engine and hose were sent to Portage for some reason only to find a stream about fifteen to twenty feet high, a mere trifle. It is safe to say that if the town had a team of horses with the engine and a regular fire engine at hand, the damage would have been less. The mill was a big blaze, and the smoke was very thick. The fire was very hot, and the flames were very high. The fire was very hot, and the flames were very high. The fire was very hot, and the flames were very high.

the contents of a pill of water that the prisoner kept in his cell. This is a standard trick of the prisoners. He has worked it on nearly all the jail inmates. The prisoner also worked a good one on his late guard, Melroe, whom he despised. Melroe was always objecting to the black cat the prisoner keeps in his cell, and one day he told the prisoner he wouldn't have the cat around, so he had tied a few days previous of a cat getting up on a bed and sucking the breath from a baby, so that it was dead in the morning. Birchall immediately replied, "Well, it wouldn't be that way with you, old man. If the cat got up on the bed and sucked your breath it would be the cat, not you, that would be dead in the morning." Birchall describes the cat, the author of the remarkable confounding letter, as a pretty good looking fellow, with a regular snout, somewhat and eyes not very dark, dressed in a suit with and without a bow.

THE CONVICT'S SON.

How a Young Australian Surprised His English Friends.

Story Which Shows That a Man May Be a Convicted Felon and Yet Be the Son of a Gentleman.

The young men were practising archery on Mr. Henson's lawn and Fred Mackintosh had astonished every one with his skill as a marksman.

"You shoot like an Indian," said Jim Campbell.

"I'm sure," said that," said the other, smiling. "I was born in Australia, the son of a convict."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"You know very well that if you're the son of a convict you can't associate with us, and so I'll tell the convicts to go."

"The young man's plain speaking did not seem to give the other any uneasiness, but he answered, with a short laugh, that he was a gentleman."

"I might as well please, but you are not a gentleman, and you are not a convict, and you are not a son of a gentleman."

"I am a gentleman," said the young man, "and I am a son of a gentleman."

"You are a gentleman," said the young man, "and I am a son of a gentleman."

"You are a gentleman," said the young man, "and I am a son of a gentleman."

FOUND HIS ENEMY.

Thirty Years of Waiting for Vengeance Knocked into a Cocked Hat.

We were sitting on the veranda of a hotel at Niagara Falls, writes a New York contributor, when I noticed looking sharply at the man on my right.

"Yes, sir," was the prompt reply.

"Do you remember a boy named Gold-

"Very distinctly, sir."

"He was a boy that he put a package of letters under his desk and he told me only yesterday."

"And you looked him up?"

"I did. I looked him up until he could hardly stand, and I've always been glad of it."

"You have, eh?" said the other, breathing fast and hard.

"I presume he did, as he was a thorough young villain."

"He was an oath that he would grow up and hunt for you and pound you within an inch of your life."

"But I haven't heard from him yet."

"You hear from him now! He stands before you! I am that boy!"

"Prepare to be licked! My time has come at last!"

"He made a dive for the old pedagogue, but the latter evaded him, made a half-turn and hit him on the jaw and forehead with his knuckles."

"He didn't wait quite long enough, I guess."

"That's where I made a mistake," he replied. "I see now that I ought to have held out until he had got to be about 120 years old. The old devil is all of iron, but he looked right out of the reel, and I'll never have the heart to stand up to him again. Here's thirty years of waiting for vengeance knocked into a cocked hat in three minutes!"
